The field is filled with tall, green sugarcane stalks. The harvester has a large black canopy with the CASE IH logo on it. The background shows a clear sky and some trees in the distance.

Preparing to convert farmland

The preparation of the land involves grading the land to ensure good water runoff in the correct direction

Grading farmland

Reducing compaction

Using a combination rotavator and 3-tine ripper is a quick and efficient way of de-compacting the soil and providing a good soil tilth

Reducing compaction

3-row 90cm spacing wholestick planter

The three-row planter is a home-made design to the specific specifications of the Austoft Multi-Row harvester.

3 row planting is faster than traditional single or double row planting.

Taking care of cane

Having good water management is key for the crop. Mechanical weeding also reduces competition for water

Harvesting by Case IH Austoft 8800 Multi-Row

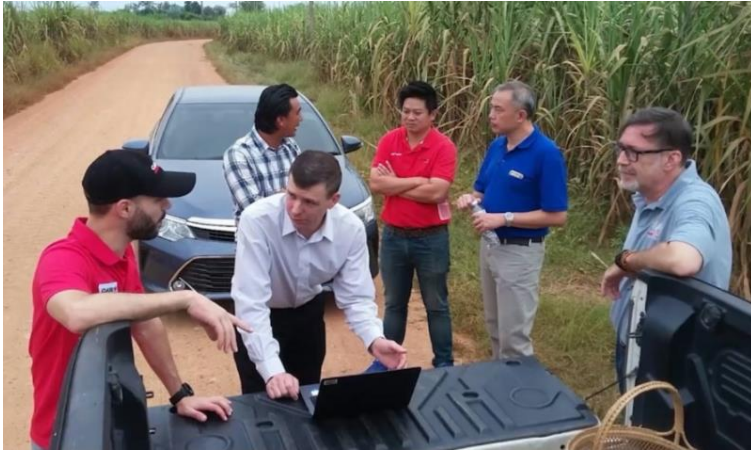

The Austoft Multi-Row is the only Case IH Multi-Row harvester working outside of Brazil and was imported for this project.

The wider basecutter discs allow the harvester to cut 3 rows (270cm) in one pass

Visits by Case IH Global team

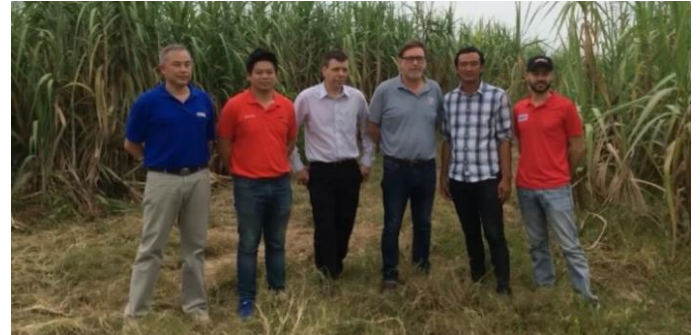

As this was a pioneering machine, the farm was visited by Case IH representatives from the USA, Brazil, Italy, China and the UK as well as by local Thailand support

Blessing of the harvester
